53.8% of all students believe that at SDSU, sexual acts are considered non-consensual if a person is incapacitated from alcohol or drugs.

47.8% of all students believe that at SDSU, sexual acts are considered non-consensual if a person is under the age of 18.
53.9% of all students believe that at SDSU, sexual acts are considered non-consensual if a person has a mental or developmental disorder that renders them incapable of giving consent.

57.3% of all students believe that at SDSU, sexual acts are considered non-consensual if a person revokes consent at any point.
8.1% of all students believe that at SDSU, do not know what sexual acts are considered non-consensual at SDSU.

9.6% of all students believe that at SDSU, a sexual act is not considered rape if no violence or threat of violence occurs.

9.6% of all students believe that at SDSU, a sexual act is not considered rape if no violence or threat of violence occurs.
5.5% of all students believe that at SDSU, a sexual act is not considered rape if the people involved are in a romantic relationship.

8.2% of all students believe that at SDSU, a sexual act is not considered rape if the accuser initially gave consent prior to revoking it.
20.8% of all students believe that at SDSU, do not know when a sexual act is not considered rape at SDSU.

73.2% of all students believe that at SDSU acquaintance rape (a form of sexual violence committed by an individual known to the victim) is the most common form of rape.
5.9% of all students believe that at SDSU, a person can give consent when they are under the age of 18.

58.7% of all students believe that at SDSU, a person can give consent when they are informed and conscious.
2% of all students believe that at SDSU, a person can give consent when they are incapacitated, but coming in and out of consciousness.

2.3% of all students believe that at SDSU, a person can give consent when they are being threatened or coerced.
87.1% of all students believe that the absence of saying “no” qualifies as consent to have sex.

8.8% of all students believe that at SDSU, if a student reports a sexual assault, he or she will be required to participate in an informal resolution in which the accused must meet with the accuser.