On Being Naked:

*The Curious History of Nudism
in North American Lesbian Culture*

Wednesday, November 13, 2013
1-3pm in Love Library 430, SDSU

Jennifer Terry is an associate professor of Women's Studies at the University of California at Irvine. Her research and teaching focuses on cultural studies of science and technology; formations of sexuality; critical approaches to modernity; and American studies in transnational perspective.

Dr. Terry will critically examine the idealization of nudity in relation to race, class, gender, nation, empire, and the politics of embodiment.
